

ATTENTION

Habituated Mountain Goats in Area

Goats in this area are closely approaching and following people and entering campsites. Habituated wildlife can become aggressive. Goats have sharp, lethal horns.

- Stay at least 50 yards (1/2 length of football field) away from all wildlife.
- If a goat approaches you, slowly move away to keep a safe distance. If the goat follows, be prepared to chase it off by yelling, waving arms and clothing, or throwing rocks!
- Goats crave salts. Use the toilets where available. Otherwise, urinate on bare rocks, between rocks or locations inaccessible to goats, at least 100 feet away from trails or campsites. Do not leave sweaty clothes unattended.
- Male goats become more aggressive during their breeding season, October – December.

Following these guidelines will help protect you and the goats.
