

Nature closes the generation gap . . .

A love of nature knows no age. Everyone enjoys the pristine beauty of a healthy forest. But, the beauty of many of our forests and rangelands is deteriorating without the inclusion of fire cycles. The lack of fire has allowed forests to grow overly dense.

The U.S. Departments of Agriculture and the Interior are reducing the accumulation of flammable forest debris and restoring wildfire-damaged areas to a healthier state so the beauty can once again be enjoyed by this generation and those to come.

Find out more on what you can do to ensure this beauty for future generations by visiting <http://www.whitehouse.gov/infocus/healthyforests/toc.html>

Healthy Forests Are the Future

About 80 percent of the Nation's scarce freshwater resources originate on forests. The health of this land is tantamount to the purity of America's water supply.
